

Overview

Kim Fineman focuses her practice in business restructurings, bankruptcy and business litigation. She has extensive experience in real property, commercial and intellectual property matters. Kim advises companies and their creditors through financial and operational challenges. She also has experience representing lenders and asset-based financiers in pursuing their contractual remedies in state and federal courts, including receiverships. Her strength is in parsing through complex business problems and telling the underlying story—either to the court or in negotiations. Kim spent several years with the international law firm of Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton, followed by several years as a member of the judicial staff in the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of California. Early in her career, she was trained in finance and business litigation at Severson & Werson and Bronson, Bronson & McKinnon. Kim also served as director of legal education for an arm of the University of California.
